CROP PROSPECT WAY BELOW AVERAGE

OHIO CORN CROP NOT HURT DROUTH HITS OTHER STATES

Forecasts Show That the Dry Weather Has Had Deteriorating Results—Wheat and Oats Improve—Maise and Potatoes Show Losses—Poor Prospect For Fruit In All Sections of the Country.

Crop yields this year will be, on the whole, well below the average of recent years, the department of agriculture's crop reporting board announced Wednesday in issuing its September production forecasts. There has been little improvement in the general situation over what it was a month ago.

Corn has been deteriorating on account of dry weather except in Ohio, where prospects are the best in years. The condition in Ohio is 101, according to the department figures; the estimated crop is 186,397,000 bushels.

The total indicated production of corn is now 3,885,000,000 bushels, a loss of 65,000,000 bushels in the last month. The indicated crop is 448,000,000 bushels more than produced last year but slightly under the average of the last five years.

Generally, thruout the south and in a large part of the corn belt, the crop is not so promising as it was a month ago. There was little change in Iowa.

Wheat Forecast Increased.

Spring wheat yields are running slightly higher than early expectations. The crop is now forecast at 284,000,000 bushels or 21,000,000 more than early August conditions indicated, and 1,000,000 more than was produced last year.

Winter wheat already harvested is estimated at 416,000,000 bushels, making the country's total prospective wheat crop about 700,000,000 bushels, or 22,000,000 more than produced last year, but 137,000,000 less than the five year average.

Irish potato prospects declined 9,000,000 bushels because of hot weather in August, with drought in many sections. The crop is now forecast at 344,000,000 bushels which is 111,000,000 bushels smaller than last year's harvest.

In proportion to population, the potato crop seems likely to be the smallest since 1916, but the final weeks of the growing season may change the outlook materially, the crop experts say. Indication are for a yield of about 100 bushels an acre as compared with 124 last year.

Threshing of oats brought results above earlier expectations and a production of 1,462,000,000 bushels is indicated. That is a gain of 75,000,000 over last month's forecast.

Rains during August improved the tobacco crop in the east but nearly all Kentucky and Tennessee types deteriorated. Indicated production is placed at 1,247,000,000 pounds, an increase of 13,000,000 over a month ago. Peanuts suffered from the widespread drought in the southern states and production will be much below the five year average, the crop now being forecast at 608,000,000 pounds. Fruit prospects have changed but little in the last month and are still below the usual average.

TO ELIMINATE POLITICS FROM ROAD BUILDING

Was Demanded Today by L. B. Palmer, President of the Farm Bureau Federation.

Columbus, O., Sept. 10 (UP). — Elimination of politics from Ohio highway building was demanded Thursday by L. S. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, in a letter to Senator Robert E. Hempel, Warren, chairman of the legislative highway committee.

"We are not interested in any particular kind or type of road," Palmer wrote. "We simply ask that proper roads be built to care for the traffic. As taxpayers, we believe we have the right to demand a dollar's worth of value for the dollar expended."

Palmer declared the federation was determined to wage a vigorous fight against highway politics, declaring:

"We are open minded in regard to all phases of highway development and we want politics eliminated from this important phase of government operation.

Roads are too vital to the welfare of our rural folks and the nation as a whole, to be dominated by practices that we know are going on."

Lesson for September 13

PAUL IN THESSALONICA AND BEREA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thess. 5:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving God's Word.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Studying God's Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Kinds of Hearers.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Searching the Scriptures.

I. Paul Preaching in Thessalonica (vv. 1-4).

L. His Method (vv. 1-2).
He observed the divine order, to the Jews first wherever he went (Acts 1:8; Rom. 2:9-10). He was exceedingly anxious for his kinsmen in the flesh, but whenever they proved themselves unworthy, he turned to the Gentiles. His own kinsmen first should be the method of every missionary, but should not stop there. He went out on the Sabbath day so as to find them assembled together.

2. His Message (v. 3).
His message was always and ever the same, viz., that Jesus is the Christ. To the Jew the essential thing was to be convinced from the Scriptures. So Paul expounded to them the Scriptures. This is the business of all ministers, to expound the Scriptures, to prove their positions by the Word. Concerning the Christ, he set forth three propositions:

(1) The Scriptures prove that Christ must be a sufferer (v. 3). "It behooved Christ to suffer." No plainer reference need be made than Isaiah 53, but it seems that the rabbis of that time had explained away the fact of a suffering Messiah so that the Jewish people were only looking for a glorious and powerful king to come; therefore they rejected Christ because of His lowly appearance. The same method of exegesis is employed by many Bible teachers and preachers today. Only the emphasis is placed upon the literal suffering of the Messiah, while they spiritualize and allegorize the teaching of the glorious coming of the Messiah to judge His enemies and to reign upon the earth (1 Th. 4:13-14; Isa. 53; Jer. 23:5-8; Zech. 9:14; Luke 1:1-3; Acts 15:14-17).

(2) That Christ Must Rise Again from the Dead (v. 3).
This he proved by the Scriptures. The resurrection of Christ, and the bodily resurrection of believers, needs sound and practical exposition in our churches today.

(3) That the Historic Jesus Whom He Proclaimed Did Suffer and Rise from the Dead; Therefore, He Is That Christ, the Predicted Messiah (v. 3).

II. The Attitude of the Jews (vv. 4-10a).
While some Jews believed and many Greeks, the envy of certain Jews was so aroused at Paul's success that they gathered together the worthless fellows of the town and set on foot a riot. They assaulted the house of Jason and dragged him before the rulers, having failed to get the missionaries. In their indictment of the missionaries they uttered unwittingly some great truths. They said: "These men have turned the world upside down." It is true that the gospel is revolutionary, but it is not treason to fight government. The real truth, however, is that the world is now upside down. The work of the gospel is to set it right side up. They turned the preaching of Paul into a species of magic. He did preach the kingship of Jesus (see verse 7), but not as they endeavored to make it appear. Jesus is most assuredly coming to reign on this earth (Ps. 2). Let all men acknowledge Him in humble submission.

III. Paul Preaching in Berea (vv. 10b-15).

1. His Method (v. 10).
He entered the Jewish synagogue and preached Jesus unto them.

2. The Reception of the Gospel by the Bereans (vv. 11-12).
It was with gladness of heart. The message was just as new to these Jews and just as counter to their way of thinking as it was to the Thessalonian Jews, but they had a more noble disposition. The success of the gospel depends altogether on the disposition of the hearers. Two things are said of them:

(1) They received the message gladly.

(2) They searched the Scriptures daily for the truthfulness of the preaching. For this worthy act Paul says they were more noble than those at Thessalonica.

LARGE FERTILIZER SHIPMENT

What is probably the largest consignment of fertilizer ever loaded and shipped by any company in one day to a single destination will be the Pickaway County Farm Bureau order from the Tennessee Copper and Chemical Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, today, at the company's plant at Lockland. There will be loaded and shipped two special solid trains of fertilizer for Pickaway County Farm Bureau. One train of thirty-five cars will move over the Pennsylvania Railroad and the other forty-three cars will be sent over the Norfolk & Western, both arriving in Circleville Thursday afternoon, September 10. From Circleville the train will be split up and sent to the various points in the county where it will be unloaded and distributed to the farms on Friday.

The total value of this cargo will exceed $50,000, and will be sown on over 20,000 acres of wheat land in the county. A large part of the shipment is high grade mixed goods costing around $30.00 per ton. A net saving between $5,000 and $6,000 will be made in this large purchase, which amount will be rebated back to the farmer.

Pickaway County again easily maintains her supremacy in co-operative work by having by far the largest fertilizer order in the state. Hundreds of farmers and several railroad officials will be in Circleville Thursday afternoon to witness the arrival of this extraordinary shipment.

FIRST DEGREE MURDER CASES

More Than Trebled In Hamilton County During the Fiscal Year Ending Aug. 31.

Cincinnati, Sept. 8.—First degree murder cases more than trebled and second degree murder and auto stealing more than doubled during the fiscal year ending August 31, Charles S. Bell, County Prosecutor, announced in his annual report today.

During the fiscal year his office handled 555 cases as compared with 545 the preceding year.

Of these, seven were first degree murder cases as against two the year before; 15 second degree murder cases as compared with eight the last year, while auto thefts numbered 55 against 27 and manslaughter cases 19 as compared with 15 in 1924.

Moonshine and bootleg liquor was blamed by the prosecutor for many of the cases.

WILLIAM HARRISON

Arrested In Columbus and Brought To County Jail By Deputy Sheriff's Irwin and Littleton This Morning.

Tuesday north of South Bloomfield on the "Scioto Trail," William Harrison driving a Nash car while in an intoxicated condition, collided head-on with a Ford truck of Contractor Waters, who is working on the Hargus creek culvert, damaging the truck beyond repair.

Deputy Sheriff's Howard Irwin and Frank Littleton went to Columbus this morning and arrested Harrison on a warrant sworn out before Justice Friece. Harrison was jailed and will have a hearing in the Justice's court Thursday.

Folder Is Handy to File Recipes

Popular Manilla Recipe-cle Will Solve Problem for Housewife.

This bride first started housekeeping way back three weeks ago. One day last week she just happened to look in the mirror while she was trying to plan dinner. There was a great big, perplexed wrinkle in her brow. Was she getting old already? No, the wrinkle was not permanent. She was sure in time it would be, if every day she had to struggle so to decide what dainty dishes would tempt her biggest lord.

Cook books confuse her. She rarely can find what she wants and, if she does, the recipe would feed a family of six. Her mother has given her several recipes clipped from magazines and newspapers. She has gone over this miscellaneous material time and time again—in fact she was aimlessly doing just that when the wrinkle was discovered.

Then she got an idea—a new wrinkle—the helpful variety. She bought a manilla folder—a most un-intriguing, business-like thing. On small pieces of paper she wrote the principal cookery divisions—soups, entrees, fish, roasts, cakes, puddings, etc. These she glued to the divisions

Manilla Folder Makes Convenient File for Cook's Recipes.

Light Transmission

A new kind of glass, of organic origin, which is reported to permit the passage of ultraviolet light, has recently been perfected by two Austrian scientists, Herr Pollak and Herr Ripper. The new glass is called pollopas, and it is made by a chemical condensation of urea with formaldehyde. Pollopas is considerably lighter than ordinary glass, weighing about one and one-half times as much as an equal volume of water, while common glass often has triple this weight. It is quite soft, being somewhat softer than mother of pearl, and is easily abraded. It is very transparent.—Science Service.

Named by Cortez

The name "California" was applied by Cortez to the bay and the country, which he supposed to be an island. The name is that of an island in an old Spanish romance, where a great abundance of precious stones was found. Vincent Blasco Ibanez in his novel "Queen Calafia" gives an interesting account of early California.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. LIVING IN GLASS HOUSES.

"People who live in glass houses should not throw stones."

In some of our divorce courts seventy-five or a hundred families will be severed in two or three hours by decrees oftentimes humorous, and hardly a paper will mention the wholesale massacre of domestic dreams, unless some woman or man airs some surprising and dramatic grievance.

But, let a person of financial or social or professional prominence slip, and the headlines flare and the columns are rattled off like machine guns. The important thing is; how does this affect our common decency, our sense of mercy? Is there anything left of the old ideals of mind-ing one's own business?

Tens of thousands of divorce are granted in this country every year to people who are desperate enough to go thru the ordeal of public trials. Tens of thousands of other homes are broken up by legal separations without the finality of divorce, and tens of thousands of other households are dissolved by the simpler expedient of the husband's never coming home, or the wife's going back to mother.

It is all frightfully chaotic and the complete destruction of the home is freely predicted by numerous good people.

But, before we despair, we should take a look at the true condition of those good old homes. We might ask why, if they were so pure and solid and beautiful, they are falling apart so rapidly now. Nobody who knows anything about the true conditions of those times, would dare praise them as ideal.

Perhaps we shall gradually come to live so that we shall not fear the light of publicity. Perhaps everybody will grow so honest or so callous that he or she will not let the neighbors either rule or ruin his or her life. But, it would help a lot if all of us heeded the old saw about living in glass houses, because most of us hope our window curtains are all the way down.

TREASURE DIVERS
STIR UP LEGEND

Upper Michigan Pioneers
Think Expedition Will
Raise Trader of 1849.

Northport, Mich.—Interest has been aroused among old settlers here by the report from Chicago that a sea-plane is being outfitted to locate sunken treasure in this northern end of Lake Michigan. Various stories are making the rounds as to the character of the treasure. A sailing vessel with a government pay roll in gold, a ship laden with contraband whisky, these are the most popular.

So far as the oldest settler recollects, there never was any smuggling in these waters that ended with disaster. Only one instance of government interference is known. That was when the two-masted Merrimac attempted to smuggle liquor from Sarnia to Northport to be bootlegged to the Ottawa Indians. The revenue cutter, Andy Johnson, fired two shots over the Merrimac's bows as she attempted to run ashore in Northport harbor. This story is vouched for by Mrs. Jessie W. Hilton, granddaughter of Northport's first white settler, Rev. George N. Smith.

Recalls Indian Legend.

Mrs. Hilton said it is the Indian tradition that no sailing vessel entered the bay until the early '50s. When Nanabosho, the Ottawa god, blew his breath upon the waters of Lake Michigan and separated the shoal waters of Grand Traverse bay from their mother-bosom, white men were unknown. Only Indians paddled their dugouts around Cat Head point entrance to the bay. The Indians were superstitious about the bay, especially Hog Island, now Ford's island, twenty nautical miles due south from Cat Head. Even now, few rest in their ninety-mile paddling from the straits to claim a haven on its deeply-wooded shores. Water demons, the Indians say, are ever waiting, ready to drag the unwary traveler to the depths.

However, Mrs. Hilton has evidence that there lay just within Cat Head point, at the entrance of Grand Traverse bay, a ship lost in the early fifties. Her grandfather, Reverend Mr. Smith, came upon a specker when he entered the bay in the little two-masted sailing vessel, Merrill, in May, 1849. He had come from his Black river missionary field among the Ottawas to find a home for his Indians on the west shore of Grand Traverse bay. The ship, according to Reverend Mr. Smith, "lay down in the deep, a long stark spar pointing from its watery sepulcher." The following winter, when the bay was frozen, his Ottawa charges, fulfilling their belief that none should know of the resting place of the dead, cut off the spar level with the frozen surface.

According to the story which has come down to Mrs. Hilton, the sunken vessel was known as the Venus. It was owned by Capt. Peter Nelson and a man known as Robinson. They did a fur-trading business. George Bigelow, a stepson of Capt. Nelson, who kept Traverse light on Cat Head point in the early '50s, has told Mrs. Hilton that he remembers seeing the spar sticking from the water. The light-house referred to was erected in 1852 and is still in use.

No Ships Salvaged There.

Gil M. Dame, erstwhile politician and now president of Cherry Home corporation, voiced the belief of the people in the vicinity. "This section of the lake," said Mr. Dame, "never gives up its dead. No lost vessel has ever been salvaged. Down went the Sardinia, off Gardner's point on Cat Head bay. She was loaded with salt, enough to anchor a dreadnaught. She was never salvaged."

Gil Dame, also owned a ship, the W. C. Kimball, which he sold to Kehl & Stevens. On her maiden trip for her new owners, on May 8, she was lost with her crew of five, and has never been heard of since. Her deck load of shingles washed ashore all along Grand Traverse bay, and with it, for say old settlers, "this section of the lake never gives up its dead."

Mrs. James Stevens, widow of the captain, walked the shore day after day. She ended in the insane asylum where she died two years ago.

The trunk washed ashore from the Kimball told a tale of fate. It belonged to a young Norwegian, Staley Johnson, who, after crossing the Atlantic, and making his way to Chicago had boarded the Kimball. Fate had let him cross the Atlantic, only to betray him on an inland sea.

A brother of Mrs. Hilton, Will P. Wolfe, was first mate of the Kimball. Wolfe was the friend of many well-known men, among them James Whitcomb Riley and Harry C. New, now postmaster general. Wolfe had been city editor of the Indianapolis News at a time when Riley, New, Harry Gingham and Luther Benson were on the staff. Maurice Benson, author of the "Tallahassie Girl," which he wrote in Northport, at Wolfe's residence, was also an intimate of the lost mate. The Ottawas have a legend, Mrs. Hilton said, which relates that many years ago a great famine overcame all beasts of the Wisconsin shore. Death stalked abroad and many swam into the great waters never to return.

AMUSEMENTS

Hailed as the great American picture, "The Goose Hangs High," the James Cruze latest Paramount production opened last night at the Metropolitan theater and captured a first night audience with its simple story, human characterizations and flawless direction.

In its original form it was a popular stage success by Lewis Beach, but Cruze, with the help of his scenarists, Walter Woods and Anthony Coldeway, has incorporated comedy situations and bits of "business" that were out of the question in the spoken version because of the limitations of the stage.

As it unfolds on the screen, there is an unaffected naturalness about it, an air of homey realism that stamps it as refreshingly different from the usual run of picture plays.

The story concerns itself with an average American family—typical every-day folks—and develops the sort of dramatic, pathetic and comic incidents that people experience in real life.

The plot hinges on the sacrifices of the Ingalls parents and the selfishness of their children. This is clearly brought out in the earlier scenes of the film when the children, with characteristic thoughtlessness desert their parents on Christmas eve to celebrate the holiday with their own friends.

A crisis threatens when the father loses his job and the children face the prospect of having to earn their own living. The manner in which they work out the family salvation is interestingly and vividly depicted.

The acting of the admirably selected cast is one of the outstanding features of this photoplay. All of the leading players, which include Constance Bennett, Myrtle Stedman, Esther Ralston, George Irving and Edward Peil, Jr., give very creditable performances and the minor characters are also effectively portrayed.

"The Goose Hangs High" is enthusiastically recommended to every film fan in search of excellent entertainment.

WYOMING COWBOY
BECOMES AN EARL

Sheridan, Wyo., Sept. 8.—A Wyoming cowboy and ranchman succeeded to an earldom today when Oliver Henry Wallop of near Sheridan received word of the death of his elder brother, the earl of Portsmouth, in London last night. Half an hour after he received word of his brother's death he said he would assume the title. Reports that 20 years ago he renounced his title in order to obtain a public lumber contract in this country, which he could not hold as an alien, were declared by the new earl to be without foundation.

"It would be impossible for me to do that," he said.

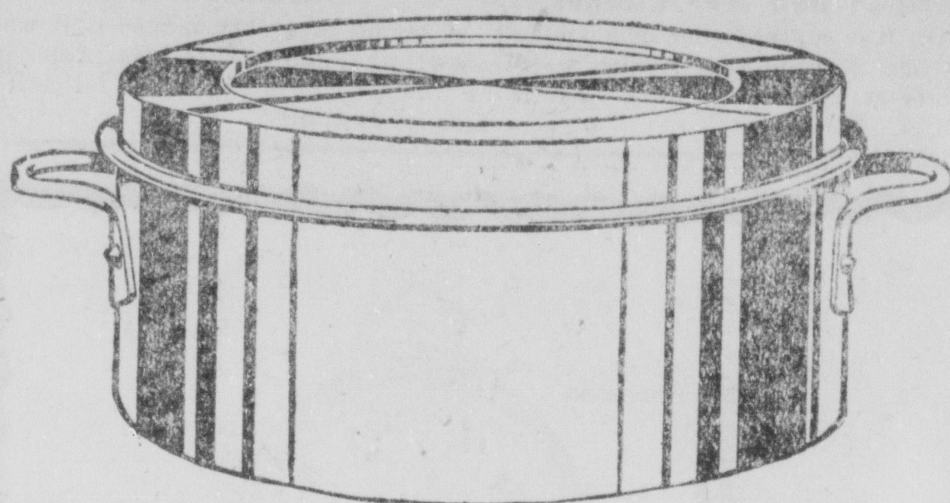

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed?" There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"

Pickaway County Boys' and Girls' clubs were represented at the State fair with 29 Pig club entries, four pens of poultry, three demonstration teams, one individual demonstrator and two clothing exhibits.

The Pig club members won eleven ribbons, including two firsts, five seconds, two thirds, one fourth and one fifth. The Poultry club members won one first, one third and one fourth.

The leaders of the demonstration teams; Mrs. B. W. Young, Miss Nettie Rader and Donald Morgan, worked hard with the teams and the members did their level best to uphold the Pickaway county standard of efficiency.

The winning girls' team was trained by home demonstration agents, who devote all their time to girls' and women's work.

Too Late

A wild-haired, morbid young man was raving about the emptiness of life. "The sooner the world ends the better," he said. "We all ought to be annihilated."
"My dear fellow," his friend replied, "the world's packed with interesting things. They've just discovered that human life began on this earth about a million years ago—and you talk of wiping us all out."
"A million years ago?"
"The papers are full of it."
"Oh, well," said the morbid man, miserably, "it's too late to do anything about it, then."

Tire Prices Are LOW—CRUDE RUBBER HIGHEST IN YEARS

Buy Now and Save Money!

The unprecedented demand for Firestone quality and mileage has more than doubled the sales of Gum-Dipped Cords to car owners so far this year, enabling us—because of this tremendous volume—to keep prices low.

Experienced car owners insist on tires that deliver the greatest mileage at the lowest cost per mile, because such tires last longer—make the restricted rubber supply go further—reduce crude rubber costs—and help maintain the present low tire prices.

Gum-Dipping, the

MOST MILES PER DOLLAR

Firestone extra process, is also one of the biggest and most important economy factors in tire performance. This method of treating cord fabric, developed by Firestone tire chemists and engineers, insulates every fiber of every cord with rubber, and gives the sidewalls the extra strength to withstand the extra flexing strain—insuring maximum safety, comfort and economy.

Buy now—make sure of economical transportation by obtaining these outstanding Firestone superiorities at present low prices.

The Burning Question of the Moment

When Admiral Peary, then a naval commander, came back from the Pole a group of special correspondents for big city papers secured a tug from the Dominion government and steamed up the Labrador coast to meet the returning explorer and to get the first interviews with him.

In the party was one New York correspondent who spent three days framing a highly scientific and involved question which was designed, so he thought, to bring out the exact truth regarding Peary's achievement. It will be remembered that the Dr. Cook controversy was then waging.

All the way up the coast he was insisting that he should have a chance, without interruption, to fire his broadside.

Peary's answer, he stated, would inevitably have a direct bearing upon the claims of Dr. Cook and would show conclusively whether Peary had really reached the Pole.

In a body the newspaper men boarded Peary's ship and met him. After the first exchange of greetings and congratulations the spokesman for the interviewers cleared his throat and said:

"Commander Peary, this gentleman here has a very important question to ask you."

Peary turned aggressively upon the New Yorker. His bushy eyebrows and bushier mustache were bristling.

"What do you want to know?" he demanded briskly.

The New York newspaper man was seized with confusion. He fumbled in his pockets and produced a cigarette.

"What is it you want to ask me?" repeated Peary sharply.

The correspondent swallowed hard: "Have you got a match?" he inquired.

Proving There's Something in a Name

I once knew a colored child called "Exey" for short, whose real name was Eczema. The mother of the unfortunate pickaninny had found the word in a patent medicine almanac and had fallen in love with its poetic sound. I also included in my acquaintance at one time a negro youth who answered to the title of Hallowed Harris.

"Yas, suh," stated his father on being pressed for his reason for choosing so unusual a baptismal prefix for his offspring. "I got dat name outen de Holy Bible. Don't you 'member, boss, whar it say in de Lawd's Prayer, 'Hallowed be dy name?'"

But the Testamental name which struck me as being most interesting of all was worn by a dog—a mangy appearing, breedless, nondescript rabbit dog which trailed an old darkey whom a friend of mine claims he met on a road in the piney woods of south Georgia. The dog ranged off into the thickets and his owner ordered him back.

"Did I hear you calling that dog 'Tover,' Uncle?" asked my friend.

"Naw, suh, I called him 'Over,' w'ich is short for 'Mo'over,' w'ich it is de dawg's right name."

"Where did you get that name and why?"

"Fur good reasons, boss," said the old man, with a chuckle. "W'en I gits dat dawg he's jest little scabby pup an' alluz 'nointin' of hisse'f wid his tongue. So I 'members whar de Good Book say, 'An' de dawg, Mo'over, licked his sores.' So I knowed den I had done hit on de right name fur dat pup of mine."

A Violent Indisposition

I first heard this one several years ago. I have heard it several times in varying forms since then. But for me age cannot wither nor custom stale it. To my way of thinking, it is still worthy of being included in any symposium, great or small, of stories dealing with the Afro-American population.

As my favorite version runs, a colored man, on appearing for work one morning wore a countenance so battered that almost one might have been pardoned for assuming that its owner had made a more or less successful effort to run it through a meat chopper. The white man for whom the scarred and bruised victim worked took one look at that disfigured face and threw up both hands in horror and sympathy.

"Great heavens, boy," he cried, "what you been doing to yourself?"

"Me? I ain't been doin' nothin' to myse'f," explained the darky. "But somethin' is done been did to me, Mr. Watkins. It's lak dis, suh: Yistiddy evenin' I got into a kind of an argymint wid another nigger an' one word led to another, ez it will. An' purty soon I up an' hauled off an' hit at him wid my fist."

"Well, seemed lak that irritated him. So he took an split my lip wide open wid a pair of brass knucks, an' he blacked dis eye of mine clear down to my armpit an' he tore one ear moughty high loose from de side of my hald, an' den, to cap all, he knocked me down and stomped up an' down 'pun my stomach wid his feet. . . . Honest to G—d, Mr. Watkins, I never did git so sick of a nigger in all my life!"

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

OVER HALF OF THE ANNUAL TOLL

Of Deaths From Drowning In This Country Are Preventable Says Capt. Carr.

"Over a half of the annual toll of 6,500 deaths from drowning in this country can be prevented," Capt. D. Melville Carr, American Red Cross Life-Saving Field Representative, who is here assisting the local Chapter in its water safety campaign, declared today.

"The more intensive thought one gives to this vital problem of water safety, the more is he convinced the majority of drownings are preventable. Their three major causes are: carelessness, lack of information, and fear. Of these, I believe fear takes first place.

"It is undoubtedly one of the swimmer's worst enemies. I have known men to drown within 20 feet of safety when if they had only held their head they could have swum twice the distance. Drownings frequently occur just outside the edge of standing bathers at beaches. The person who is just learning to swim unknowingly goes beyond his depth. Becoming a little exhausted, he tries to stand up. Down he goes, swallowing a big gulp of water and he immediately becomes panic stricken. Instead of gliding through the water with sure, steady strokes, he beats and kicks in swift, ineffective efforts, and before he has swum half the distance he is capable of covering he is completely unnerved and exhausted.

"Boys between the ages of 15 and 25 are the ones most guilty of the crime of carelessness. Of all the drownings in the United States, 44 per cent of the victims are between these ages. The desire to swim just a little farther out than the other fellow dares to has sent many a swimmer to his grave.

"Another piece of folly which often ends disastrously is the habit many swimmers have of diving into the water when they are not familiar with the swimming place. It is an exceedingly dangerous practice. Where the water appears to be 10 feet deep, it may be no more than 3. Where everything looks favorable for a good dive, a jagged stump may lurk just beneath the surface. The swimmer who dives into strange waters is the undertaker's best friend."

"That accidental drownings can be practically eliminated," he continued, "is shown by the fact that although more people are taking advantage of this health-giving exercise today than ever before in the history of the world, the annual drowning rate in this country is steadily decreasing. In 1911 it was 9.5 per 100,000 people. In 1921 the last year for which the compilation has been made, it had dropped to 7.4, a decrease of 2.1 per cent.

"The only way that any perceptible decrease will be effected in our annual drownings," he concluded, is a wide dissemination of life-saving methods which, while teaching swimmers how to rescue a drowning person, impresses upon them also that the water can be either their best friend or their worst enemy—whichever they choose to make it."

NEW FORD MODELS GIVE BIG BOOST TO SELLING

More Than 500 Unfilled Orders On Books of Local Dealers—Take Several Weeks.

Unprecedented increase in Ford sales is expected to result during September after distribution gets under way on the improved model being manufactured by the Ford Motor Car Co.

Orders for the new model have been piling up for more than 30 days, according to F. C. Poole, assistant manager of the Columbus Ford branch. There are at least 500 unfilled signed orders for Ford cars in Columbus and Franklin County, he said. That many more orders have been promised after the new model goes on display, he said.

Thus far only three new models have been received in this territory, which includes central and southern Ohio, and northern Virginia and West Virginia. Two of the models are on display in Springfield and the other in Lima.

It is expected 10 new cars will be received at the local Ford branch today, and their immediate distribution to Columbus dealers for display purposes is planned by L. Petit, manager.

About 10 days will be required to supply the 255 dealers in this territory with exhibition models, Mr. Poole said. Work of disposing of the unfilled orders will begin then, with approximately 100 cars a day being distributed, he estimated.

More than 4,000 signed orders for the new models are in the hands of dealers in this territory, it is understood. Nearly that many more of unsigned orders, awaiting only placing of display cars, have been promised according to Mr. Poole.

Work at the Columbus Ford plant, as well as at branches elsewhere, has been practically at a standstill for a month, awaiting distribution of the new model, the assistant manager indicated. Only a few of the old models were being received, and a majority of the prospective Ford buyers were rushing their orders for the new models.

Earth's Population
Ernest George Ravenstein, geographer and statistician, estimated the population of the earth at 1,487,900,000 in 1890, and his figures stood unchanged for some years. IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Possible to Have Too Many "Irons in Fire"

If this ever comes to the knowledge of your young friend in the outer office, he probably will urge that I pay more attention to my own business and less to his. And, in a general way, he will be right. No one ever lost money, time or public esteem by letting the other fellow run his own works. But I like the young friend. And he is toting too big a stick, "J. P." writes in the Kansas City Star.

"How's your pep?" I asked. And he said impatiently that his pep was all right.

"It's gotta be all right," he said. "I've got too many irons in the fire to let down."

As long as I have known the young friend he has had an armful of irons in the fire, and half the time the fire wasn't very hot and he had to spend his spare hours blowing it. He began as an amateur champion in one of the walloping classes. Had a kick in each mit, his little playmates said, and might by this time have been fighting for stakes beyond the dreams of his youthful avarice if he had been content to become a professional man. But no. He must go into business.

"He'll get there, too," his friends say.

Very likely he will, if his wagon does not break down. As long as I've known him he has been the wheel-horse in his office. He was the one who did important tricks on Sundays and holidays, when the rest of the force could not be found by blood-hounds. He was always willing to stay up and get up. If any one had a job too much the young friend took it over. By and by he began to branch out and run businesses on the side.

Of course, he also has indigestion and his color is not what it should be.

There are lots of arguments favoring a modified and conservative laziness. One has a better time and probably lives longer. Of course, the granite tombstone will not be so tall as it would be if one had consistently overloaded all his life.

CROP PROSPECT WAY BELOW AVERAGE

OHIO CORN CROP NOT HURT DROUTH HITS OTHER STATES

Forecasts Show That the Dry Weather Has Had Deteriorating Results—Wheat and Oats Improve—Maize and Potatoes Show Losses—Poor Prospect For Fruit In All Sections of the Country.

Crop yields this year will be, on the whole, well below the average of recent years, the department of agriculture's crop reporting board announced Wednesday in issuing its September production forecasts. There has been little improvement in the general situation over what it was a month ago.

Corn has been deteriorating on account of dry weather except in Ohio, where prospects are the best in years. The condition in Ohio is 101, according to the department figures; the estimated crop is 186,397,000 bushels.

The total indicated production of corn is now 3,885,000,000 bushels, a loss of 65,000,000 bushels in the last month. The indicated crop is 448,000,000 bushels more than produced last year but slightly under the average of the last five years.

Generally, throughout the south and in a large part of the corn belt, the crop is not so promising as it was a month ago. There was little change in Iowa.

Wheat Forecast Increased.

Spring wheat yields are running slightly higher than early expectations. The crop is now forecast at 284,000,000 bushels or 21,000,000 more than early August conditions indicated, and 1,000,000 more than was produced last year.

Winter wheat already harvested is estimated at 416,000,000 bushels, making the country's total prospective wheat crop about 700,000,000 bushels, or 22,000,000 more than produced last year, but 137,000,000 less than the five year average.

Irish potato prospects declined 9,000,000 bushels because of hot weather in August, with drought in many sections. The crop is now forecast at 344,000,000 bushels which is 111,000,000 bushels smaller than last year's harvest.

In proportion to population, the potato crop seems likely to be the smallest since 1916, but the final weeks of the growing season may change the outlook materially, the crop experts say. Indication are for a yield of about 100 bushels an acre as compared with 124 last year.

Threshing of oats brought results above earlier expectations and a production of 1,462,000,000 bushels is indicated. That is a gain of 75,000,000 over last month's forecast.

Rains during August improved the

ACTUALLY SWALLOWED BIG KNIFE

Columbus, O., Sept. 9 (UP).—Jack Hill, 24, Edgeville, Ohio, aspired to be a sword swallower and took advantage of "amateur night" at the Knickerbocker here to display his wares.

Hill swallowed the sword—a nine inch knife, and walked from the spotlight.

An hour later physicians made an abdominal incision and recovered the knife. Hill had allowed the hilt to slip between his lips and the sword reposed in his inner regions.

tobacco crop in the east but nearly all Kentucky and Tennessee types deteriorated. Indicated production is placed at 1,247,000,000 pounds, an increase of 13,000,000 over a month ago. Peanuts suffered from the widespread drought in the southern states and production will be much below the five year average, the crop now being forecast at 608,000,000 pounds. Fruit prospects have changed but little in the last month and are still below the usual average.

ORCHARDIST TOM MILLER PASSED AWAY

Thomas Miller passed away at his home on Second street, at Frankfort, Ohio, at 10 o'clock Tuesday evening.

Mr. Miller had been in poor health for about two years. His death had been expected by the family for some time.

He was born on a farm near Frankfort, February 14, 1853, and came to the village with his parents when a young man.

He is survived by one son, Harry Miller, of Frankfort. Two sisters, Mrs. S. F. Secrest, of New York City and Mrs. Emerson Roseboom, of Columbus and two brothers, Rev. David Miller, of Mt. Vernon, and Warren Miller, of Frankfort, also survive him.

Mr. Miller was well known throughout the county, as he was always active in politics and served as county commissioner at one time.

He was a great lover of fine fruit and vegetables and was the pioneer in the planting of large fruit orchards in that community.

The funeral services will be held Friday at 2 o'clock from his late home. —Scioto Gazette.

The deceased was well known in this city where he frequently visited. He was one of the growers of the finest apples raised in Ross county.

PROPOSAL MADE FOR PURCHASE BOBB GROCERY

Midland Grocery Company Makes offer of $400,000 Proposal Up to Directors.

Notices sent to stockholders of the G. W. Bobb Co., reveal that plans are under way for the purchase of all the stock of merchandise of this wholesale grocery. Details of the proposition have not been made public, but it was learned Wednesday that the Midland Grocery company is the proposed buyer and that the stock of merchandise is invoiced at about $400,000.

It also was learned that the offer came as a surprise to the officers of the Bobb Co., but that the directors feel it should be submitted to the stockholders for their approval or rejection.

If the offer is accepted it will mean the retirement from business of one of the most successful wholesale houses in central Ohio, and the further expansion of the Midland Grocery Co., which owns the Monypenny-Hammond branch in Columbus and other wholesale grocery houses in Springfield, Dayton and other smaller cities of southwestern Ohio.

If the offer is rejected by the stockholders of the Bobb company, the company will continue its business.

The G. W. Bobb Co., was organized about 22 years ago by Will Bobb, the youngest son of the late George Bobb, and has had a rapid growth, until it is now one of the largest concerns of the kind in Columbus. In addition to its stock of merchandise, it owns warehouses at Neilston and Naghten streets and a large tract of ground at Neilston and Buckingham streets, on which its garage is located.

Columbus, O., Sept. 10 (UP). — Elimination of politics from Ohio highway building was demanded Thursday by L. S. Palmer, president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, in a letter to Senator Robert E. Hempel, Warren, chairman of the legislative highway committee.

"We are not interested in any particular kind or type of road," Palmer wrote. "We simply ask that proper roads be built to care for the traffic. As taxpayers, we believe we have the right to demand a dollar's worth of value for the dollar expended."

Palmer declared the federation was determined to wage a vigorous fight against highway politics, declaring:

"We are open minded in regard to all phases of highway development and we want politics eliminated from this important phase of government operation.

Roads are too vital to the welfare of our rural folks and the nation as a whole, to be dominated by practices that we know are going on."

Lesson for September 13

PAUL IN THESSALONICA AND BEREA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 17:1-15.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."—1 Thess. 5:21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Loving God's Word.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Studying God's Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Kinds of Hearers.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Searching the Scriptures.

I. Paul Preaching in Thessalonica (vv. 1-4).

1. His Method (vv. 1-2).

He observed the divine order, to the Jews first wherever he went (Acts 1:8; Rom. 2:9-10). He was exceedingly anxious for his kinsmen in the flesh, but whenever they proved themselves unworthy, he turned to the Gentiles. His own kinsmen first should be the method of every missionary, but should not stop there. He went out on the Sabbath day so as to find them assembled together.

2. His Message (v. 3).

His message was always and ever the same, viz., that Jesus is the Christ. To the Jew the essential thing was to be convinced from the Scriptures. So Paul expounded to them the Scriptures. This is the business of all ministers, to expound the Scriptures, to prove their positions by the Word. Concerning the Christ, he set forth three propositions:

(1) The Scriptures prove that Christ must be a sufferer (v. 3). "It behooved Christ to suffer." No plain reference need be made than Isaiah 53, but it seems that the rabbis of that time had explained away the fact of a suffering Messiah so that the Jewish people were only looking for a glorious and powerful king to come; therefore they rejected Christ because of His lowly appearance. The same method of exegesis is employed by many Bible teachers and preachers today. Only the emphasis is placed upon the literal suffering of the Messiah, while they spiritualize and allegorize the teaching of the glorious coming of the Messiah to judge His enemies and to reign upon the earth (1st Sam. 7:8-16; Isa. 53; Jer. 23:5-8; Zech. 9:14; Luke 1:1-13; Acts 15:14-17).

(2) That Christ must Rise Again from the Dead (v. 3).

This he proved by the Scriptures. The resurrection of Christ, and the bodily resurrection of believers, needs sound and practical exposition in our churches today.

(3) That the Historic Jesus Whom He Proclaimed Did Suffer and Rise from the Dead; Therefore, He Is That Christ, the Predicted Messiah (v. 3).

II. The Attitude of the Jews (vv. 4-10a).

While some Jews believed and many Greeks, the envy of certain Jews was aroused at Paul's success that they gathered together the worthless fellows of the town and set on foot a riot. They assaulted the house of Jason and dragged him before the rulers, having failed to get the missionaries. In their indictment of the missionaries they uttered unwittingly some great truths. They said: "These that have turned the world upside down." It is true that the gospel is revolutionary, but it is not treason to right government. The real truth, however, is that the world is now upside down. The work of the gospel is to set it right side up. They turned the preaching of Paul into a specious lie. He did preach the kingship of Jesus (see verse 7), but not as they endeavored to make it appear. Jesus is most assuredly coming to reign on this earth (Ps. 2). Let all men acknowledge Him in humble submission.

III. Paul Preaching in Berea (vv. 10b-15).

1. His Method (v. 10).

He entered the Jewish synagogue and preached Jesus unto them.

2. The Reception of the Gospel by the Bereans (vv. 11-12).

It was with gladness of heart. The message was just as new to these Jews and just as counter to their way of thinking as it was to the Thessalonian Jews, but they had a more noble disposition. The success of the gospel depends altogether on the disposition of the hearers. Two things are said of them:

(1) They received the message gladly.

(2) They searched the Scriptures daily for the truthfulness of the preaching. For this worthy act Paul says they were more noble than those at Thessalonica.

LARGE FERTILIZER SHIPMENT

What is probably the largest consignment of fertilizer ever loaded and shipped by any company in one day to a single destination will be the Pickaway County Farm Bureau order from the Tennessee Copper and Chemical Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, today, at the company's plant at Lockland. There will be loaded and shipped two special solid trains of fertilizer for Pickaway County Farm Bureau. One train of thirty-five cars will move over the Pennsylvania Railroad and the other forty-three cars will be sent over the Norfolk & Western, both arriving in Circleville Thursday afternoon, September 10. From Circleville the train will be split up and sent to the various points in the county where it will be unloaded and distributed to the farms on Friday.

The total value of this cargo will exceed $50,000, and will be sown on over 20,000 acres of wheat land in the county. A large part of the shipment is high grade mixed goods costing around $30.00 per ton. A net saving between $5,000 and $6,000 will be made in this large purchase, which amount will be rebated back to the farmer.

Pickaway County again easily maintains her supremacy in co-operative work by having by far the largest fertilizer order in the state. Hundreds of farmers and several railroad officials will be in Circleville Thursday afternoon to witness the arrival of this extraordinary shipment.

Folder Is Handy to File Recipes

Popular Manilla Receptacle Will Solve Problem for Housewife.

This bride first started housekeeping way back three weeks ago. One day last week she just happened to look in the mirror while she was trying to plan dinner. There was a great big, perplexed wrinkle in her brow. Was she getting old already? No, the wrinkle was not permanent. She was sure in time it would be, if every day she had to struggle so to decide what dainty dishes would tempt her fliegst lord.

Cook books confuse her. She rarely can find what she wants and, if she does, the recipe would feed a family of six. Her mother has given her several recipes clipped from magazines and newspapers. She has gone over this miscellaneous material time and time again—in fact she was almost doing just that when the wrinkle was discovered.

Then she got an idea—a new wrinkle—the helpful variety. She bought a manilla folder—a most intriguing, business-like thing. On small pieces of paper she wrote the principal cookery divisions—soups, entrees, fish, roasts, cakes, puddings, etc. These she glued to the divisions of the folder. It makes a fine index for her little file of recipes.

Now a folder like this, though practical, is not a thing of beauty. This bride is proud of her kitchen, so she covered the folder with a pretty fabric. This was done by cutting a piece of cretonne to fit the folder and gluing it on with liquid glue. She used the glue sparingly, so as not to stain the fabric, and let it get almost dry before applying it to the cretonne.

A plain light color might be used effectively to cover the folder with bright motifs cut out and glued on to make the informal design.

Cape Coats Promise to Be Popular This Fall

Topcoats or travel coats have become almost necessary, and in their latest version are so cleverly designed that while they fill every utilitarian purpose they possess a style and distinction never before seen in coats of this type.

Much of their smartness is due to the exceptional beauty of the materials, which reveal designs that range from small geometrical patterns to bold designs in subdued or colorful effects.

In purchasing a coat it is well to bear in mind its future use and not select a model that has obviously only one place in the sartorial scheme.

Among the newest models are cape coats, so well adapted to the needs of the traveler, which will be found exceedingly useful as topcoats later on in the season.

Fine Scotch woolsens in striking plaided effects are frequently chosen for the development of coats of this type and the result is excellent.

More conservative but equally attractive are cape coats of wool in one of the fashionable shades of green or brown that are destined for a vogue in the coming season.

Tub Silks Liked

Tub silks are leaders in favor for serviceable gowns. Most of the stripes, which are so fashionable, the checks and plaids, are made in the plain tailored manner. These silks are particularly appropriate for young girls and young women in their pretty fresh tints and gay patterns.

Cubist Fashion

Cubist designs are popular today. Not only do the cube, square, triangle and rhomboid designs appear on printed silk fabrics, but on gowns of lace which have the designs sewn on them a silk velvet without regard to form or symmetry

Light Transmission

A new kind of glass, of organic origin, which is reported to permit the passage of ultraviolet light, has recently been perfected by two Austrian scientists, Herr Pollak and Herr Ripper. The new glass is called polloplas, and it is made by a chemical condensation of urea with formaldehyde. Polloplas is considerably lighter than ordinary glass, weighing about one and one-half times as much as an equal volume of water, while common glass often has triple this weight. It is quite soft, being somewhat softer than mother of pearl, and is easily abraded. It is very transparent.—Science Service.

The name "California" was applied by Cortez to the bay and the country, which he supposed to be an island. The name is that of an island in an old Spanish romance, where a great abundance of precious stones was found. The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. LIVING IN GLASS HOUSES.

"People who live in glass houses should not throw stones."

In some of our divorce courts seventy-five or a hundred families will be severed in two or three hours by decrees oftentimes humorous, and hardly a paper will mention the wholesale massacre of domestic dreams, unless some woman or man airs some surprising and dramatic grievance.

But, let a person of financial or of social or professional prominence slip, and the headlines flare and the columns are rattled off like machine guns. The important thing is; how does this affect our common decency, our sense of mercy? Is there anything left of the old ideals of minding one's own business?

Tens of thousands of divorce are granted in this country every year to people who are desperate enough to go thru the ordeal of public trials. Tens of thousands of other homes are broken up by legal separations without the finality of divorce, and tens of thousands of other households are dissolved by the simpler expedient of the husband's never coming home, or the wife's going back to mother.

It is all frightfully chaotic and the complete destruction of the home is freely predicted by numerous good people.

But, before we despair, we should take a look at the true condition of those good old homes. We might ask why, if they were so pure and solid and beautiful, they are falling apart so rapidly now. Nobody who knows anything about the true conditions of those times, would dare praise them as ideal.

Perhaps we shall gradually come to live so that we shall not fear the light of publicity. Perhaps everybody will grow so honest or so callous that he or she will not let the neighbors either rule or ruin his or her life. But, it would help a lot if all of us heeded the old saw about living in glass houses, because most of us hope our window curtains are all the way down.

TREASURE DIVERS
STIR UP LEGEND

Upper Michigan Pioneers
Think Expedition Will
Raise Trader of 1849.

Northport, Mich.—Interest has been aroused among old settlers here by the report from Chicago that a seaplane is being outfitted to locate sunken treasure in this northern end of Lake Michigan. Various stories are making the rounds as to the character of the treasure. A sailing vessel with a government pay roll in gold, a ship laden with contraband whisky, these are the most popular.

So far as the oldest settler recollects, there never was any smuggling in these waters that ended with disaster. Only one instance of government interference is known. That was when the two-masted Merrimac attempted to smuggle liquor from Sarnia to Northport to be bootlegged to the Ottawa Indians. The revenue cutter, Andy Johnson, fired two shots over the Merrimac's bows as she attempted to run ashore in Northport harbor. This story is vouched for by Mrs. Jessie W. Hilton, granddaughter of Northport's first white settler, Rev. George N. Smith.

Recalls Indian Legend.

Mrs. Hilton said it is the Indian tradition that no sailing vessel entered the bay until the early '50s. When Nanabosho, the Ottawa god, blew his breath upon the waters of Lake Michigan and separated the shoal waters of Grand Traverse bay from their mother-bosom, white men were unknown. Only Indians paddled their dugouts around Cat Head point entrance to the bay. The Indians were superstitious about the bay, especially Hog Island, now Ford's Island, twenty nautical miles due south from Cat Head. Even now, few rest in their ninety-mile paddling from the straits to claim a haven on its deeply-wooded shores. Water demons, the Indians say, are ever waiting, ready to drag the unwary traveler to the depths.

However, Mrs. Hilton has evidence that there lay just within Cat Head point, at the entrance of Grand Traverse bay, a ship lost in the early fifties. Her grandfather, Reverend Mr. Smith, came upon a specter when he entered the bay in the little two-masted sailing vessel, Merrill, in May, 1849. He had come from his Black river missionary field among the Ottawas to find a home for his Indians on the west shore of Grand Traverse bay. The ship, according to Reverend Mr. Smith, "lay down in the deep, a long stark spar pointing from its watery sepulcher." The following winter, when the bay was frozen, his Ottawa charges, fulfilling their belief that none should know of the resting place of the dead, cut off the spar level with the frozen surface.

According to the story which has come down to Mrs. Hilton, the sunken vessel was known as the Venus. It was owned by Capt. Peter Nelson and a man known as Robinson. They did a fur-trading business. George Bigelow, a stepson of Capt. Nelson, who kept Traverse light on Cat Head point in the early '50s, has told Mrs. Hilton that he remembers seeing the spar sticking from the water. The light-house referred to was erected in 1852 and is still in use.

No Ships Salvaged There.

Gil M. Dame, erstwhile politician and now president of Cherry Home corporation, voiced the belief of the people in the vicinity. "This section of the lake," said Mr. Dame, "never gives up its dead. No lost vessel has ever been salvaged. Down went the Sardens, off Gardners' point on Cat Head bay. She was loaded with salt, enough to anchor a dreadnaught. She was never salvaged."

Gil Dame, also owned a ship, the W. C. Kimball, which he sold to Kohl & Stevens. On her maiden-rip for her new owners, on May 8, she was lost with her crew of five, and has never been heard of since. Her deck load of shingles washed ashore all along Grand Traverse bay, and with it a trunk, but no trace of the crew, for, say old settlers, "this section of the lake never gives up its dead."

Mrs. James Stevens, widow of the captain, walked the shore day after day. She ended in the insane asylum, where she died two years ago.

The trunk washed ashore from the Kimball told a tale of fate. It belonged to a young Norwegian, Staley Johnson, who, after crossing the Atlantic, and making his way to Chicago had boarded the Kimball. Fate had let him cross the Atlantic, only to betray him on an inland sea.

A brother of Mrs. Hilton, Will P. Wolfe, was first mate of the Kimball. Wolfe was the friend of many well-known men, among them James Whitcomb Riley and Harry C. New, now postmaster general. Wolfe had been city editor of the Indianapolis News at a time when Riley, New, Harry Gingham and Luther Benson were on the staff. Maurice Benson, author of the "Tallahassie Girl," which he wrote in Northport, at Wolfe's residence, was also an intimate of the lost mate.

The Ottawas have a legend, Mrs. Hilton said, which relates that many years ago a great famine overcame all beasts of the Wisconsin shore. Death stalked abroad and many swam into the great waters never to return.

AMUSEMENTS

Hailed as the great American picture, "The Goose Hangs High," the James Cruze latest Paramount production opened last night at the Metropolitan theater and captured a first night audience with its simple story, human characterizations and flawless direction.

In its original form it was a popular stage success by Lewis Beach, but Cruze, with the help of his scenarists, Walter Woods and Anthony Coldeway, has incorporated comedy situations and bits of "business" that were out of the question in the spoken version because of the limitations of the stage.

As it unfolds on the screen, there is an unaffected naturalness about it, an air of homey realism that stamps it as refreshingly different from the usual run of picture plays.

The story concerns itself with an average American family—typical every-day folks—and develops the sort of dramatic, pathetic and comic incidents that people experience in real life.

The plot hinges on the sacrifices of the Ingals parents and the selfishness of their children. This is clearly brought out in the earlier scenes of the film when the children, with characteristic thoughtlessness desert their parents on Christmas eve to celebrate the holiday with their own friends.

A crisis threatens when the father loses his job and the children face the prospect of having to earn their own living. The manner in which they work out the family salvation is interestingly and vividly depicted.

The acting of the admirably selected cast is one of the outstanding features of this photoplay. All of the leading players, which include Constance Bennett, Myrtle Stedman, Esther Ralston, George Irving and Edward Peil, Jr., give very creditable performances and the minor characters are also effectively portrayed.

"The Goose Hangs High" is enthusiastically recommended to every film fan in search of excellent entertainment.

WYOMING COWBOY
BECOMES AN EARL

Sheridan, Wyo., Sept. 8.—A Wyoming cowboy and ranchman succeeded to an earldom today when Oliver Henry Wallop of near Sheridan received word of the death of his elder brother, the earl of Portsmouth, in London last night. Half an hour after he received word of his brother's death he said he would assume the title. Reports that 20 years ago he renounced his title in order to obtain a public lumber contract in this country, which he could not hold as an alien, were declared by the new earl to be without foundation.

"It would be impossible for me to do that," he said.

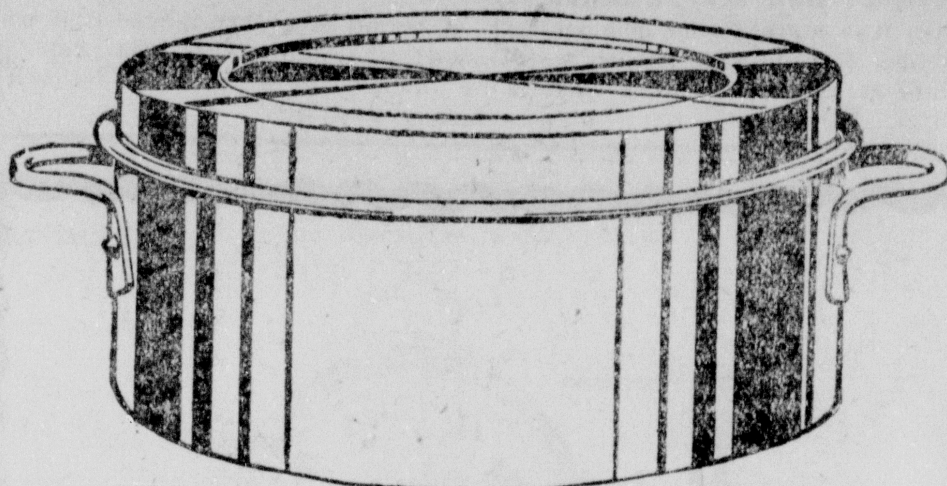

Her Recognition

Small Elizabeth and her mother were walking down the street when they saw an urchin approaching them. Elizabeth stuck out her tongue. When they had gone on, her mother inquired "Why did you stick out your tongue at that little boy we just passed." There was a pause while Elizabeth considered. "Why?" she replied, at length. "Why, mother, to show him I recognized him!"

Too Late

A wild-haired, morbid young man was raving about the emptiness of life.

"The sooner the world ends the better," he said. "We all ought to be annihilated."

"My dear fellow," his friend replied, "the world's packed with interesting things. They've just discovered that human life began on this earth about a million years ago—and you talk of wiping us all out."

"A million years ago?"

"The papers are full of it."

"Oh, well," said the morbid man, miserably, "it's too late to do anything about it, then."

Firestone

Tire Prices Are LOW—CRUDE RUBBER HIGHEST IN YEARS

Buy Now and Save Money!

The unprecedented demand for Firestone quality and mileage has more than doubled the sales of Gum-Dipped Cords to car owners so far this year, enabling us—because of this tremendous volume—to keep prices low.

Experienced car owners insist on tires that deliver the greatest mileage at the lowest cost per mile, because such tires last longer—make the restricted rubber supply go further—reduce crude rubber costs—and help maintain the present low tire prices.

Gum-Dipping, the

MOST MILES PER DOLLAR

Firestone extra process, is also one of the biggest and most important economy factors in tire performance. This method of treating cord fabric, developed by Firestone tire chemists and engineers, insulates every fiber of every cord with rubber, and gives the sidewalls the extra strength to withstand the extra flexing strain—insuring maximum safety, comfort and economy.

Buy now—make sure of economical transportation by obtaining these outstanding Firestone superiorities at present low prices.

The Burning Question of the Moment

When Admiral Peary, then a naval commander, came back from the Pole a group of special correspondents for big city papers secured a tug from the Dominion government and steamed up the Labrador coast to meet the returning explorer and to get the first interviews with him.

In the party was one New York correspondent who spent three days framing a highly scientific and involved question which was designed, so he thought, to bring out the exact truth regarding Peary's achievement. It will be remembered that the Dr. Cook controversy was then raging.

All the way up the coast he was insisting that he should have a chance, without interruption, to fire his broadside.

Peary's answer, he stated, would inevitably have a direct bearing upon the claims of Dr. Cook and would show conclusively whether Peary had really reached the Pole.

In a body the newspaper men boarded Peary's ship and met him. After the first exchange of greetings and congratulations the spokesman for the interviewers cleared his throat and said:

"Commander Peary, this gentleman here has a very important question to ask you."

Peary turned aggressively upon the New Yorker. His bushy eyebrows and bushier mustache were bristling.

"What do you want to know?" he demanded briskly.

The New York newspaper man was seized with confusion. He fumbled in his pockets and produced a cigarette.

"What is it you want to ask me?" repeated Peary sharply.

The correspondent swallowed hard: "Have you got a match?" he inquired.

Proving There's Something in a Name

I once knew a colored child called "Exey" for short, whose real name was Eczema. The mother of the unfortunate pickaninny had found the word in a patent medicine almanac and had fallen in love with its poetic sound. I also included in my acquaintance at one time a negro youth who answered to the title of Hallowed Harris.

"Yas, suh," stated his father on being pressed for his reason for choosing so unusual a baptismal prefix for his offspring. "I got dat name outen de Holy Bible. Don't you 'member, boss, what it say in de Lawd's Prayer, 'Hallowed be dy name?'"

But the Testamental name which struck me as being most interesting of all was worn by a dog—a mangy appearing, breedless, nondescript rabbit dog which trailed an old darkey whom a friend of mine claims he met on a road in the piney woods of south Georgia. The dog ranged off into the thickets and his owner ordered him back.

"Did I hear you calling that dog 'Rover,' Uncle?" asked my friend.

"Naw, suh, I called him 'Over,' w'ich is short for 'Mo'over,' w'ich it is de dawg's right name."

"Where did you get that name and why?"

"Fur good reasons, boss," said the old man, with a chuckle. "W'en I gits dat dawg he's jest little scabby pup an' alluz 'nointin' of hisse'f wid his tongue. So I 'members whar de Good Book say, 'An' de dawg, Mo'over, licked his sores.' So I knowed den I had done hit on de right name fur dat pup of mine."

A Violent Indisposition

I first heard this one several years ago. I have heard it several times in varying forms since then. But for me age cannot wither nor custom stale it. To my way of thinking, it is still worthy of being included in any symposium, great or small, of stories dealing with the Afro-American population.

As my favorite version runs, a colored man, on appearing for work one morning wore a countenance so battered that almost one might have been pardoned for assuming that its owner had made a more or less successful effort to run it through a meat chopper. The white man for whom the scarred and bruised victim worked took one look at that disfigured face and threw up both hands in horror and sympathy.

"Great heavens, boy," he cried, "what you been doing to yourself?"

"Me? I ain't been doin' nothin' to myse'f," explained the darky. "But somethin' is done been did to me, Mr. Watkins. It's lak dis, suh: Yistiddy evenin' I got into a kind of an argymint wid another nigger an' one word led to another, ez it will. An' purty soon I up an' hauled off an' hit at him wid my fist."

"Well, seemed lak that irritated him. So he took an split my lip wide open wid a pair of brass knucks, an' he blacked dis eye of mine clear down to my armpit an' he tore one ear moughty nigh loose from de side of my haid, an' den, to cap all, he knocked me down and stomped up an' down 'pun my stomach wid his feet. . . . Honest to G—d, Mr. Watkins, I never did git so sick of a nigger in all my life!"

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

OVER HALF OF THE ANNUAL TOLL Of Deaths From Drowning In This Country Are Preventable Says Capt. Carr.

"Over a half of the annual toll of 6,500 deaths from drowning in this country can be prevented," Capt. D. Melville Carr, American Red Cross Life-Saving Field Representative, who is here assisting the local Chapter in its water safety campaign, declared today.

"The more intensive thought one gives to this vital problem of water safety, the more is he convinced the majority of drownings are preventable. Their three major causes are: carelessness, lack of information, and fear. Of these, I believe fear takes first place.

"It is undoubtedly one of the swimmer's worst enemies. I have known men to drown within 20 feet of safety when if they had only held their head they could have swum twice the distance. Drownings frequently occur just outside the edge of standing bathers at beaches. The person who is just learning to swim unknowingly goes beyond his depth. Becoming a little exhausted, he tries to stand up. Down he goes, swallowing a big gulp of water and he immediately becomes panic stricken. Instead of gliding through the water with sure, steady strokes, he beats and kicks in swift, ineffective efforts, and before he has swum half the distance he is capable of covering he is completely unnerved and exhausted.

"Boys between the ages of 15 and 25 are the ones most guilty of the crime of carelessness. Of all the drownings in the United States, 44 per cent of the victims are between these ages. The desire to swim just a little farther out than the other fellow dares to has sent many a swimmer to his grave.

"Another piece of folly which often ends disastrously is the habit many swimmers have of diving into the water when they are not familiar with the swimming place. It is an exceedingly dangerous practice. Where the water appears to be 10 feet deep, it may be no more than 3. Where everything looks favorable for a good dive, a jagged stump may lurk just beneath the surface. The swimmer who dives into strange waters is the undertaker's best friend."

"That accidental drownings can be practically eliminated," he continued, "is shown by the fact that although more people are taking advantage of this health-giving exercise today than ever before in the history of the world, the annual drowning rate in this country is steadily decreasing. In 1911 it was 9.5 per 100,000 people. In 1921 the last year for which the compilation has been made, it had dropped to 7.4, a decrease of 2.1 per cent.

"The only way that any perceptible decrease will be effected in our annual drownings," he concluded, is a wide dissemination of life-saving methods which, while teaching swimmers how to rescue a drowning person, impresses upon them also that the water can be either their best friend or their worst enemy—whichever they choose to make it."

NEW FORD MODELS GIVE BIG BOOST TO SELLING More Than 500 Unfilled Orders On Books of Local Dealers—Take Several Weeks.

Unprecedented increase in Ford sales is expected to result during September after distribution gets under way on the improved model being manufactured by the Ford Motor Car Co.

Orders for the new model have been piling up for more than 30 days, according to F. C. Poole, assistant manager of the Columbus Ford branch. There are at least 500 unfilled signed orders for Ford cars in Columbus and Franklin County, he said. That many more orders have been promised after the new model goes on display, he said.

Thus far only three new models have been received in this territory, which includes central and southern Ohio, and northern Virginia and West Virginia. Two of the models are on display in Springfield and the other in Lima.

It is expected 10 new cars will be received at the local Ford branch today, and their immediate distribution to Columbus dealers for display purposes is planned by L. Petit, manager.

About 10 days will be required to supply the 255 dealers in this territory with exhibition models, Mr. Poole said. Work of disposing of the unfilled orders will begin then, with approximately 100 cars a day being distributed, he estimated.

More than 4,000 signed orders for the new models are in the hands of dealers in this territory, it is understood. Nearly that many more of unsigned orders, awaiting only placing of display cars, have been promised according to Mr. Poole.

Work at the Columbus Ford plant, as well as at branches elsewhere, has been practically at a standstill for a month, awaiting distribution of the new model, the assistant manager indicated. Only a few of the old models were being received, and a majority of the prospective Ford buyers were rushing their orders for the new models.

R. L. Brehmer is the local agent of the Ford Co.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Possible to Have Too Many "Irons in Fire"

If this ever comes to the knowledge of your young friend in the outer office, he probably will urge that I pay more attention to my own business and less to his. And, in a general way, he will be right. No one ever lost money, time or public esteem by letting the other fellow run his own works. But I like the young friend. And he is toting too big a stick, "J. P." writes in the Kansas City Star.

"How's your pep?" I asked. And he said impatiently that his pep was all right.

"It's gotta be all right," he said. "I've got too many irons in the fire to let down."

As long as I have known the young friend he has had an armful of irons in the fire, and half the time the fire wasn't very hot and he had to spend his spare hours blowing it. He began as an amateur champion in one of the walloping classes. Had a kick in each mit, his little playmates said, and might by this time have been fighting for stakes beyond the dreams of his youthful avarice if he had been content to become a professional man. But no. He must go into business.

"He'll get there, too," his friends say.

Very likely he will, if his wagon does not break down. As long as I've known him he has been the wheel-horse in his office. He was the one who did important tricks on Sundays and holidays, when the rest of the force could not be found by blood-hounds. He was always willing to stay up and get up. If any one had a job too much the young friend took it over. By and by he began to branch out and run businesses on the side—

Of course, he also has indignation and his color is not what it should be—

There are lots of arguments favoring a modified and conservative laziness. One has a better time and probably lives longer. Of course, the granite tombstone will not be so tall as it would be if one had consistently overloaded all his life.

"Get in the Well Dressed Circle"

A feature in connection with Club Clothes is the fact that the models are always correct and in good taste. The designing staff steers clear of the extreme, which accounts for the good looking lines of Club Clothes.

We are showing a splendid array of dependable fabrics in the season's choicest colorings. Among them you will find the suit which you will want, which will fit you and which you will enjoy wearing.

And when you consider the low prices at which Club Clothes are sold, you naturally wonder how it is done. The answer is simply this: Club Clothes are manufactured by a large organization with a large sales volume.

The tailoring factories are operated on a highly efficient basis and the cost of manufacture is reduced to a minimum. Let us show you.
